MORE LIGHT NEEDED ON BANKING METHODS

When the Bassano Board of Trade sends an invitation to E. J. Gerland, M. P. for New River, to give a lecture here on banks and banking methods, it is evidence that local business men are beginning to realize that there is one line of business, directly affecting them, which should be investigated.

During the past year or two the banks of Canada have been the object of a great deal of unfavorable criticism. Their methods of doing business have been denounced by leaders of farmer and labor organizations, and by independent thinkers. The banks have been accused of interfering with government policies and of dictating to government officials to serve their own interests.

The local situation has not developed to such a serious stage. It concerns the charges for operating a customer's bank account, and also exchange on cheques.

These items of expense are recent additions to the cost of doing business with the bank in Bassano. They amount to only a small amount per week, but over a period of several months they total up to a considerable amount, an amount which the average business man simply cannot afford to pay during this depression. Can he be blamed for expressing his dissatisfaction? Can he be blamed if he ceases to do business with the bank?

At a time when salaries, wages, and the cost of commodities and everything else is at the lowest level in the history of the west, the cost of banking goes up.

Perhaps the bank is within its legal rights in increasing these charges, but is such an increase justified in times like these?

Many of the bank's local customers are dissatisfied, and they want to learn more about banking practices. If Mr. Gerland gives an address in Bassano on this subject, he will have many interested listeners.

BRIGHT LITTLE HOUSES

(By Grace Nell Crowell)

A mansion rich and dark may seem

The height of many a woman's dream,

But oh, a little house for white,

A house all painted shining white.

Outside and in; its walls of milk,

Its shutters green, its red roof bright.

With roses clambering up the walls

Where goldenly the sunlight falls.

Inside the door Dutch tiles of blue,

White curtains everywhere, and through

The sunny rooms the fresh, clean smell

Of soap and water, things that tell

A woman's love, her daily care

Of cupboard, table, shelf and chair;

Inherent love for things her own

Which women ages long have known.

A house like this, down any street,

To me is wonderfully sweet.

Reporters Were Busy

"Are you going to take this lying down?" boomed the reporter.

"Of course not," said a voice from the rear of the hall. "The reporters are doing that."

A Long Walk

"Yes, he's a new one now, and he's been walking since he was eight months."

"Really? He must be awfully tired."

Pleanty of Bottles

"Any rats, bones, odd papers?" queried the tramp.

"I'm afraid I don't know," confessed the householder; "my wife's away on her vacation just now."

"Any bottles, sir?"

Cigar-ically Speaking

On the first night of a new production, Oscar Hammerstein was heard to observe that the play is like a cigar.

"How's that?" asked a friend.

"Well," was the ex-cigar-maker's explanation, "it's good, everybody wants a box. If it's the best of puffing will make it draw."

Something to Worry About

First Hobo: "Worry worry yer, Erbert!"

Second Hobo: "I found a recipe for 'ome made beer, ar I ain't got no 'ome."

Doublers and Co.

British Guide (showing places of interest): "It was in this room that Lord Wellington received his first commission."

American Tourist (suddenly interested): "How much was it?"

News of the Week

PLAN TO ESTABLISH NEW

CALGARY, Aug. 1.—Representatives of five provinces met Monday and formed the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation—Farmer-Labor-Socialist—later, elected by acclamation J. R. Woodworth, Winnipeg M. P., as their provisional president.

Norman P. Priestly, vice-president of the C.F.W., was the unanimous choice as provisional secretary. The eight-point program brought in by the resolution committee and approved by the conference was as follows:

1. The establishment of a planned system of social economy for the production, distribution, and exchange of all goods and services.

2. Socialization of the banking, credit, and financial systems of the country, together with the social ownership, development, operation, and control of utilities and natural resources.

3. Security of tenure for the farmer on his own land, and for the worker in his own home.

4. The retention and extension of all existing social legislation and facilities, with adequate provision for insurance against crop failure, illness, accident, old age, and unemployment, during the period of transition to the socialist state.

5. Equal economic and social opportunity without distinction of sex, nationality, or religion.

6. Encouragement of all co-operative enterprises as steps toward the achievement of the co-operative commonwealth.

7. Socialization of all health services.

8. Federal government responsibility for providing employment and adequate provision for the worker.

JOILNESS CAMP IN OTTAWA

TO VISIT BENNETT

OTTAWA, Aug. 1.—Thwarting police attempts to keep them from travelling to the capital, unemployed estimated at 300 arrived here over the week-end to attend the "Workers' Economic Conference" to be held here this week. They have concentrated at a camp on Arlington avenue just where it crosses Preston street and intend visiting Parliament Hill to interview Premier R. B. Bennett.

Three men were arrested by police Saturday while they were carrying food for merchants, bagging it off in a truck they had hired.

George Winalade, secretary of the provincial committee for the conference, estimates 1,300 men will concentrate here during the week, giving Ottawa an expensive Washington had with its "bonus army."

Leaders of the movement, it is stated, have drawn up demands on the government. One wing in the movement styled "Communists" by name, is demanding non-contributory unemployment insurance, while war veterans in the movement are asking $1.10 a day in cash from the government while they are unemployed.

GERMANY FIGHTS RIOTS

AFTER THE ELECTION

BERLIN, Aug. 1.—Renewed political riots, in which four persons were killed and many others were injured, and a firm declaration against coalition government by Chancellor Franz von Papen, were today's aftermath of yesterday's election in which no party or group of parties succeeded in winning a majority.

In the new Reichstag the balance of power is held by the Centre and their allies of the Bavarian People's Party, who have 97 seats in a total of 607. Yesterday's elections gave 230 to the Nazis, 133 to the Socialists, 86 to the Communists, 7 to the Populists, 4 to the Christian Socialists, 2 to the economic party, 2 to the Agricultural Alliance, 2 to the Farmers Federation, 2 to the State's party, and 2 to the Farmers party.

Canada's live cattle exports to Great Britain registered a considerable increase in the first half of 1932 at 9,753 head against 8,145 head for the corresponding period a year ago.

MYSTERIOUS NIGHT TRAVELER

MAY HAVE BEEN MURDERER

CALGARY, Aug. 1.—A tall man wearing a cowboy hat may be the slayer of Peter Gorganes, Calgary farmer who was shot dead at the door of his farm home more than a week ago.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police are continuing their search for the slayer or slayers of the farmer and it is now believed that their hunt must extend over the International boundary. A. O'Garra, employee of Gorganes, is making a slow recovery in Medicine Hat General Hospital. He was shot down a few moments after his employer, a revolver bullet passing through his chest.

It was learned that a car had been speeding toward the border soon after the murder which occurred about 1 a.m. Mrs. Gilchrist of the Gilchrist ranch, 25 miles southeast of Calgary, was awakened about 3 a.m. by a man who asked the way to a United States highway. It was all and was described as a description which was said to fit that of the man who shot the farmer.

SHIP CRUDE OIL FROM

FORT NORMAN WELL

Far north well of the Imperial Oil Co. at Fort Norman in the North west territories is now being operated as a commercial producer. It was learned in Calgary Sunday.

Shipment of 1,000 gallons of crude oil was made from the well to the Eldorado Mining Company at Great Lake during the first week in July and it is expected that a further consignment of 20,000 gallons will be shipped as soon as tankage can be arranged. This is believed to be the first commercial production of oil from any well north of the 60th parallel of latitude.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

CASES IN CALGARY

CALGARY, Aug. 1.—Two more cases of infantile paralysis developed in the city over the week-end.

The occurrences raise the city's total for the year to five, three of which are current. One died last Saturday. One was discharged from quarantine earlier in the summer.

Mild anxiety over the appearance of the disease was founded on the fact that Calgary's records show the lowest number of cases in the province of Alberta since 1920.

Large British Sealplane

PLACED ON TEST

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Handled with ease remarkable in a large flying machine, Britain's largest aircraft—and the largest military airplane in the world—was demonstrated in flight over the river Mersey at Rochester recently. Built by the Short Company, world famous in the design and construction of fine flying boats, the new giant first moved from the runway only a few weeks ago. The boat weighs 33 tons with fuel load and is intended for long distance reconnaissance with the Royal Air Force. Incidentally, it was insured in London for $500,000.

ADVOCATES WORK

INSURANCE PLAN

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 1.—Dr. T. E. Gregory of the London School of Economics, declared today at a conference on unemployment insurance that "the failure of the American administration to adopt some form of unemployment insurance forced it to adopt in the spring of 1932 a thoroughly vicious policy of keeping men at work producing goods which later choked the market and aggravated the crisis."

"The depression would be overcome," he said, "if industry could adjust production costs to prices or prices to the costs. Recovery will probably come through adjustment of costs to prices."

Gregory said he did not believe gold shortage to be the cause of the depression.

About Readers and Writers of Advertisements

It's a very old story—the story of the man who put in a great daily newspaper an inconspicuous 2-line advertisement as follows:

Cats Wanted—$100 each, before 9 a.m., 16 Maine street.

He put in this advertisement to prove to a doubting friend that the public reads advertisements.

You can imagine the doubter's consternation when he saw next morning a streetful of men, women, and children, each with a cat.

Whatever you yourself may do in regard to the reading of advertisements, know this: Everything printed in a newspaper gets read, and there are no advertisements which everybody is likely to see.

The company of firm with something to sell—something which thousands of persons can buy—wouldn't be very wise if it published an inconspicuous advertisement. The right thing for it to do is to crash a nail your attention by publishing an advertisement which everybody is likely to see.

Its job is to make you—a normal man or woman—see its advertisement and to make it so interesting that you'll read it. Then the advertisement must be persuasive. Also, it should incite you to take action.

The writing, designing and illustrating of advertisements intended to capture attention, intrigue interest, convey information, be convincing, breed desire for what is advertised, and incite the reader to purchase are highly specialized jobs.

If you want to know just how difficult is the job of writing an advertisement which would get 100 marks from a competent judge, try to write one—about a vacuum cleaner, a motor car, a writing ink, a child's shoe, or anything else, limiting yourself to 300 words or less.

MYSTERY

by RUBY M. AYRES

FINAL INSTALLMENT

It was Donald's wife, though she had never before heard it with that note of agony; something must be the matter; he was in trouble—unhappy, and that was not like him; he was always ready to hear other people's troubles and forget his own.

But she could not help him now; she was too tired to cry any more to make him smile. If he would just let her alone—she was quite happy. "Never leave you again," never leave you again.

She turned her face away from him; she didn't believe him, it was just another—no, no, to keep her from going to sleep, she should have looked for so wearily and tried a hard to capture—the sleep leave her alone now she had so nearly won through at last.

"Diana..." It was as if he were fighting her for every step of the ground over which she was slowly slipping away, and at first she knew contentedly that he was losing, that in spite of her weakness and his strength he would not be able to hold her back.

Punny, that seemed for a great big man not to be conquered by a little girl. She began to be faintly interested, to wonder why it should be. Life was full of things impossible to explain. She only knew that she was utterly weary and that she wanted to sleep.

HONG LEE

She said so presently, half crying, softly, but he was relentless, he could not let her go.

For a moment she fought him with the last remnants of her strength; then, suddenly she gave in with a little sigh and a half smile. "You've got your own way, then."

She had said that to him once before—long ago—and he had answered, "I generally do in the long run."

She waited now to hear him say it again. The dream wasn't coming right, somehow. She opened her eyes with a last effort, trying to see his face, but now she couldn't—... he was hiding from her, against her hands, as he had done that night in the train; he was unhappy—and she hated him to be unhappy; she knew so well how it felt.

She gave a little sigh of weary capitulation. "You always get your own way," she whispered.

The last word was lost as she fell asleep. It was nearly five o'clock in the morning when Anna, who had been refused to take any rest, slipped again into Diana's room.

Rathbone was still there, standing at the foot of the bed, his eyes on Anna's feet up to him. "Is she better?"

Rathbone nodded silently. "Is she—will she—live?" "Please God."

Anna closed her eyes for a moment, then she said, "Can you leave her for a moment now, I'll stay."

He shook his head, but she said gently, "There's someone downstairs who wants to see you—a man named Hobson—he says he must see you—that he's been looking for you all night."

"Hobson," Rathbone seemed to shake with a little start, "Oh, he told him to give you a message?"

"He won't, sir—he says he must see you—if it's only for a moment."

Anna hesitated. Rathbone looked at her, but after a moment she said reluctantly, "I'm afraid it's something very urgent, sir."

"Very well, I'll come." He bent over Diana, his fingers on her wrist for a moment, then he turned and walked out of the room.

Anna took his place at the foot of the bed. Physically she was half asleep, but her brain had never been more active and awake. She was thinking how queer it was that those women got all the love, while others more worthy and hard working were passed by.

She knew how near Diana had been to death; she knew that there had been one moment at least during the long, terrible night, when even Rathbone himself had given up hope... or hadn't he? She could not be quite sure; she knew that even a man had fought for a woman's life he had fought for Diana's.

It was as if by sheer will power he had kept her from slipping away. Of course he was in love with her. Anna found an odd satisfaction in a discovery of which she was certain that everybody else was as yet ignorant.

Mrs. Gladwyn had refused to come into the room at all; she had taken cowardly refuge in a fit of hysteria when she was told that by mistake Diana had taken an overdose of morphine and might die.

It had given Diana some sort of satisfaction, also, to be free to look at her face with a wet towel and tell her to behave; Anna had never liked Mrs. Gladwyn, and this seemed a heavenly opportunity to enjoy the many little indignities she had suffered at that lady's hands.

She was half dozing, holding firmly to the bed rail, when Rathbone came back. It might have been five minutes or half an hour later. At five o'clock in the morning it is difficult to keep track of time.

Anna started awake, smiling in nervous apology, a smile which quickly faded as she saw Rathbone's face.

"Why—sir?" she stammered. He waved her away impatiently. "It's all right. You are good. You had better go to bed. I shall say till the morning."

"If you would like me to stay..." Anna ventured timidly. "No, Markham's up if I want anything."

Anna crept away, closing the door behind her.

CHAPTER XXVI

Rathbone went back to his old place beside Diana.

For a while, as a gray look in his face, and he sat for a long time, his hands clasped between his knees, his eyes staring blankly before him.

He kept seeing pictures of a river, of a woman and of a boy—a boy who had given his life in an unavailing effort to save her.

Hobson had broken down and sobbed as he told how they had at last found them.

"Clasped in each other's arms they were—as if she'd clung to him and dragged him down. I'd have given my life, sir, rather than anything should have happened to her."

Diana stirred a little in her sleep, and Rathbone turned his head slowly and looked at her. Better than he's life than this child's, if one of them had to go.

If it had been Diana... the last six weeks rose before him, a nightmare panorama.

He had tried to do the best thing for her, and he had done the worst. He had meant to be kind, and he had only succeeded in being brutally cruel.

In anaching imagination he saw her again, sitting at that long dining table in her white robe—so far away from him and so brave. He had not guessed that it had been so great a torment for her as it had been for him.

Supposing he had still been away? He knew that the changes were going to come from him. He would have to find some way... Then suddenly he remembered—the river—and Hobson's story.

He was free, but at what a cost! The life of the woman who had cared for and sheltered for so many years, and the life of a boy as yet had known nothing of life. Perhaps in that Jonas was fortunate: he was a dreamer, and dreamers

Rathbone knew that now the story of his marriage would have to be made known; something fresh for the claws of gossiping vultures to tear to pieces. Not that he cared for himself, but it hurt him inexplicably for Diana's sake, and in a lesser degree for Kossale's.

She had meant nothing in his life, and yet he knew he would never forget her, the pitiful, earnest thing that had lived for so long in his shadow.

"Rosalie, wife of Donald Rathbone."

That was what the vultures would expect him to write on her tombstone; there seemed something of sardonic humor in it as he sat there with his eyes on Diana's face.

She was his wife—the one love of his life; even if he had never seen her again, nobody would ever have drawn near to her place in his heart.

Half child, half woman, spoilt, selfish—intolerant of life when it went the way she did not wish—yet he loved her with every impulse of his manhood.

And she loved him; for a moment he lost himself in the wonder of that thought—and of her sleeping face.

Somewhere in the house a clock chimed six, and he stood up, stretching his arms, feeling wearied to death, and yet, amidst all the tragedy surrounding him, conscious of a quiet, perfect happiness which nothing could spoil.

Diana stirred a little as if conscious of his movement, fearing that he was leaving her.

Rathbone stood still, and she turned her head, looking at him with half conscious eyes, whispering his name:

"Donald..." "Yes, my dear."

Her hand fluttered a little toward him, and he took it in his, quiet and strong, as if with it he took her whole body and soul.

He saw a little doubt flicker across her eyes and vanish. "It isn't a dream?" she asked. "No, Diana."

"And you'll never send me away again?" "Never again."

She gave a sigh of contentment. "I don't... know... what's going to happen to us," she said drowsily, half asleep once more.

"But... I know... it will be all right, always... if we're together." Rathbone bent and just touched her lips with his own.

"Yes, my heart—it will be all right—always—if we're together."

THE END

POULTRY CULTURING

(experimental farms note).

The farm flock should be carefully and systematically culled every year. The Experimental Farms, Indian Head, Saskatchewan, recommends the following in regard to culling.

Culling should be done in July or August when poor producers have generally ceased to lay. Additional runs will also be required at this time for the pullets.

If trap nests have been used and records of all birds kept culling from the production angle will be a simple matter. Where no individual records are available it will be necessary to observe the physical characteristics which indicate production or non-production in the hen.

The purpose of culling in general, is to improve the type and average production of the flock. It is therefore necessary to know the breed characteristics as well as the characteristics of production before starting to eliminate any individual from the flock. One should have, at all times, a picture of the ideal in his mind's eye but should be very careful that production is not sacrificed for unnecessary "style" or "fanciness" of type or plumage.

Features in regard to breed-type which should be considered as standards in the farm flock are: size and weight for breed, general plumage color, type of comb, color of legs and type of legs for breed (bare or feathered, etc.).

From the production standpoint a good layer may be recognized by the following characteristics: a fine, clean-cut head, showing a bright prominent, alert eye; comb and wattles having a turgid, wax-y appearance, usually bright red in color. Capacity for egg-production is shown by a wedge-shaped body, having good length, depth, and width, with the widest part well back over the hips without tapering toward the tail. Such a body provides room for large amounts of feed and for egg development. The bones in the rear part of the abdomen should be well apart and flexible to the touch.

Birds which should be culled are:

ROSEMARY WINS FIRST GAME IN PLATOFF WITH RAINIER

ROSEMARY, Aug. 3—A crowd of about one hundred spectators gathered at the Rosemary ball field last Sunday and saw the hard-fighting Rosemary team pound out a 16-7 victory over Rainier in the first game of the "Little World" series.

Ralph Burrows, performed on the mound for the home team, and held the visitors well in hand all the way. He had 10 strike-outs.

J. Bennett started the harrying for Rainier but found the going too tough and retired in favor of B. Evans in the sixth inning. The Rainier team appeared to be over-nervous and did not perform in their usual manner. A large number of errors were chalked up against them which, in many cases, resulted in scores for Rosemary. We get certain they will put up a much better exhibition on their own ground, and may possibly extend the series into the third game.

"Tilley" Johnston, imprinted the game and handled it in his usual good style. The second game will be played at Rainier on Sunday, Aug. 7. A large number of Rosemary ball fans will journey down on that day to cheer their team to victory.

RESULTS OF GRADES

7 and 8 EXAMINATIONS

Following is the list of successful grade 7 and 8 pupils of Bassano school. The names are arranged in order of rank.

Daniel Morrison, Margaret Hutcheon, Joan Fraser, Dorothy Debeer, John Bacon, Charlie Hogue, Jack Smith.

Grade 8:
Betty Puntier, Helen Travis, William Wilson and Gordon Smith tied, Jack Greig, Norman Wright, Betty June Fraser, Vernon Thompson, Elaine Gerbrandt, George Stiles, Jeanne Gamble, Lorne Klawey.

LOCAL NOTES

Misses Anette and Emily Halliwell of Medicine Hat, are visiting friends in Bassano.

Mrs. E. H. McLaugherty and son Jack returned to their home in Lacombe last week after visiting for a few days with Mrs. J. H. Stiles. Geo. Stiles accompanied them for a two weeks holiday.

"Shorty" Webster, who was at one time in business in Bassano, and recently in business at Pincher Creek, passed through town last Saturday on his way to Ontario, where he expects to reside.

Dan Morrison, of Chedoke, was a visitor in Bassano last week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Newby left last Sunday on a two weeks vacation to the Pacific coast.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McLave visited at the Brown home, Patricia, last Sunday.

J. J. Boyce and L. Whitehorn left by motor for Ontario last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Heliwell, of Medicine Hat, returned to Bassano last Sunday to visit friends in town.

Miss Margaret Gaetz, of the University Hospital, Edmonton, was over for a day, his week visiting with her mother, Mrs. J. F. Boyce.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan MacLeod returned home early this week after a vacation in the mountains. They went as far west as Trail, B. C.

Miss E. McCarter, and Art Flanagan returned to Hinton about Sunday. Miss McCarter is visiting there for a couple of weeks at the Flanagan home.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Bassarab and boys, and Chas. Hopkins and Alisa left last week on a vacation to the Pacific coast.

The dry weather has made it necessary to irrigate the town trees. The fire hose was used to water trees not reached by the irrigation ditch.

MUSIC PUPILS MAKE GOOD

The three pupils of Miss Ross, who took the Toronto Conservatory of Music examinations in Calgary all passed with honors.

Leonore Park, elementary grade, passed with honors, 73 marks; Betty Hamar, introductory grade, passed with first class honors, 98 marks; Violet Bacon, introductory grade, passed with honors, 78 marks.

THE PICTURES

Once again Mauricie Chevalier, the popular and imitable screen star, comes in "One Hour With You," coming to the Orpheum Theatre on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week, Aug. 4, 5, and 6.

Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald are teamed together in this Paramount production produced by Ernst Lubitsch.

When Armande Day comes around Chevalier thanks God that he is alive after his harrowing experience in the great war.

He suffered terribly from a serious wound, was captured by the enemy, and finally escaped back across the lines.

Doris can enemy attack at Ouiry, in the east of France, he fell, blood pouring from his mouth, from a shell wound in the lung. He remained consciousness in a German hospital and when he could be moved was sent to the prison camp at Alton Gravel, near Magdeburg.

He suffered terribly from the effect of his wound, but his gaiety was unimpaired. With some congenial fellow prisoners he organized concerts in the prison and one night the camp commandant with several German generals came to the show.

Chevalier sensed their interest and his popularity gave him the freedom of the camp.

Chevalier was invalided home to Paris. His wound was such that he could not continue in military service. He was decorated with the Croix de Guerre for gallant conduct at Ouiry.

In "One Hour With You," Chevalier plays the role of the young husband whose wife's best friend wants to have. The double complication is humorous and entertaining, and there are also several fun songs in the picture.

James Hunt and Sally Eilers star in "Dance Time," coming Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, Aug. 11, 12, and 13.
